“I have thought about this question many times in the past, but in my mind, the situation always took place in another, far-away country, and not here at home. Lately I’ve been thinking about it a lot more.”

Would I lie to save lives? Sure I would...
and I'd be wary of anyone who wouldn't.
That level of "devotion" is seldom the sign of a rational individual.

Copyleft

I'd like to think I'd have lied to save the other people.

Reasonably faithless

Looking back on the first 20 years of my life as a devout Christian,
I think I can safely - and happily - say that I would have lied to save the other people.

Hardly ever

BUT...I also am quite certain I would have thought it was the absolutely wrong thing to do, and would have spent the rest of my life feeling extremely guilty for having denied Christ for any reason.

Hardly ever

Lie lie lie. To save someone else. To save myself. Or my dog.
Or your dog. Or my favourite pair of shoes.

Hardly ever

I think the obvious action would be to deny Christ,
even if you were a believer.

Clare45

I had a conversation with a Christian over the weekend who told me he would deny Christ in a second if someone pointed a gun at him because to not do so would be stupid.

Matthew 10:34–36

Do not think that I have come to bring peace to the earth. I have not come to bring peace, but a sword. For I have come to set a man against his father, and a daughter against her mother, and a daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. And a person's enemies will be those of his own household.

Matthew 10:37–38

Whoever loves father or mother more than me is not worthy of me, and whoever loves son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me. And whoever does not take his cross and follow me is not worthy of me.

Matthew 10:39

Matthew 10:19–20

When they deliver you over, do not be anxious how you are to speak or what you are to say,
for what you are to say will be given to you in that hour.
For it is not you who speak, but the Spirit of your Father speaking through you.
