

MY HOME, MY MISSION GROUND

"There is no greater place of ministry, position, or power than that of a mother," said Phil Whisenhunt. This quote has become my lifelong ministry, and my home became my mission ground as I strive to disciple my children in the discipline and instructions of the Lord. My husband and I both believe in the importance of discipling our children. We share with them constantly that they have a Heavenly Father and we are their earthly guardians.

Here are some principles we dearly embrace in discipling them:

- God-centered character building is the foundation to everything else
- Church on Sunday was non-negotiable unless you were ill
- Resting early on Saturday night in preparation for church on Sunday
- Speaking of the Lord continually especially during meal times when many memorable and lively spiritual conversations take place
- Serving God as a family to model Christ's love in service

We asked our children about the values from our home that they would want to carry over to their future homes. Here are their testimonies.

"Mum and Dad have lived out the gospel in their relationship with each other. Having felt this overwhelming and selfless love, I want to do that too in my new home. To love when times are hard and when you're tired involves dependence on the Spirit!" - Luzerne

"The Cheng family taught me the meaning of our home not being ours, but God's. They always kept their doors open to minister to others. I've witnessed and experienced such generous hospitality and love to others, even if it's not always convenient or comfortable." - Belle (daughter in law)

"I definitely want to carry to my future home how Mum and Dad modelled and led the family in prayer. The habit of praying together had been ingrained in us through devotions, over meals, before holidays, and even when getting into the car! This trained us first to be actively considering God in our lives and second, to realise the need to rely on God!" - Raynor

"What defines our family is the amount of love and care my parents have devoted in leading us to Christ. Through disciplining by the rod, they reminded me of my sins and need for Christ. I am extremely grateful for them helping me see how God is so loving to accept me and guide me towards Christlikeness." - Gaelan

God used motherhood to mould and shape me. I am humbled by the countless lessons He has taught me. I am eternally thankful to serve along my great God in this adventure called motherhood. This investment towards His Kingdom is joy unspeakable. He alone deserves the glory and I am the grateful recipient of this blessing!

Have a blessed Mother's Day!
