Holding Wealth Lightly, Clinging to Christ Tightly

Article by Michael Lau
Instructor, Inductive Bible Study

Idolatry is not just bowing to statues; it can take subtle and dangerous forms in our hearts. John the Apostle warns in his letter with a surprising exhortation: “Little children, keep yourselves from idols” (1 John 5:21). This is curious, as the letter makes no explicit mention of idols beforehand. Yet John's words stand as a crucial reminder.

The prophet Jeremiah warned God's people about forsaking Him and turning to false gods:

“Has a nation changed its gods, even though they are no gods? But my people have changed their glory for that which does not profit... For my people have committed two evils: they have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters, and hewed out cisterns for themselves, broken cisterns that can hold no water” (Jeremiah 2:11, 13). Just as Israel traded God for false gods, Christians can exchange Him for material wealth, making possessions our modern-day idols.

Job of Uz, renowned as the greatest of the people in the East, was blameless and upright. He feared God and shunned evil (Job 1:1). His reputation was impeccable even among his peers. However, calamity struck Job unexpectedly. He lost all his children—seven sons and three daughters (Job 1:18-19). He lost all his possessions—seven thousand sheep, three thousand camels, five hundred yoke of oxen, and five hundred female donkeys, along with many servants (Job 1:3, Job 1:14-17).

In the face of such immense loss, Job responded not with bitterness, but with “Job had a profound understanding of possessions: “The Lord gave, and the Lord has taken away” (Job 1:21). Job’s response shows us that possessions are temporary, but trust in God is eternal. His heart remained anchored in God, not in what he owned.”

worship: “Naked I came from my mother's womb, and naked shall I return. The Lord gave, and the Lord has taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord” (Job 1:21). How could a man worship God after such devastation? Job could because he feared the Lord (Job 28:28). He knew God as his Redeemer (Job 19:25), the true God who holds eternal life. Job had a profound understanding of possessions: “The Lord gave, and the Lord has taken away” (Job 1:21). Job’s response shows us that possessions are temporary, but trust in God is eternal. His heart remained anchored in God, not in what he owned.

How we view possessions is ultimately a matter of the heart. It is the Creator God who gives us gold, silver, and precious children (Psalm 24:1). When we elevate these or any other created thing above God in our hearts, we fall into idolatry. What holds first place in your heart—God or your possessions?

We may not worship statues of wood or stone, but possessions can easily become our idols. When gold and silver become our obsession and security, when our children become the source of our pride and hope instead of God, we are heading down the slippery slope of idolatry.

However Christ has given us true understanding so that we may know and worship Him alone (1 John 5:20-21). Everything we have is from God; we are not owners but stewards. Possessions are temporary, but our calling is eternal. So let us hold them loosely, give generously, and use all we have for His glory.

True worship belongs to Jesus alone. Let's hold onto Him, not our possessions.
