Care Groups: Myths, Misconceptions, and the Truth

Article by Simon Lim
Care Group Leader

Care groups exist in the church to foster deeper fellowship in small communities. However, when someone joins a care group for the first time, expectations may vary. Below are three common myths—or misconceptions—about care groups.

Myth 1 – Care groups exist to meet my needs

The term care group might suggest that these communities are primarily about receiving care and support. While care groups do provide encouragement, they are not just about others meeting your needs. They are also a place for you to love God by loving His people—the church.

“Care groups give us the opportunity to love one another with the love of Christ. This is very different from expecting others to serve us.”

Care groups give us the opportunity to love one another with the love of Christ. This is very different from expecting others to serve us. When we follow Jesus' command to love one another, we will naturally care for and meet each other's needs (cf. John 15:12).

Myth 2 – Care groups should be free of messy relationships

Some people expect care groups to be a haven of perfect love and harmony, unlike the world. However, care groups are made up of sinners, and relationships will not always be easy. Members may encounter unkind words, difficult personalities, or even overbearing complaints.

Yet, God desires close fellowship among His people (cf. Heb. 10:24-25). He calls us to grow through grace and to live out the gospel in our relationships. The New Testament contains many "one another" commands—"forgive one another," "love one another," "admonish one another," "serve one another," "honor one another," and "bear one another"—just to name a few. Care groups are where God's grace enables us to navigate relational challenges and become more Christlike.

Myth 3 – Care groups should only focus on Bible study

Bible study is essential in care groups and should never be neglected. However, Bible study is not just about knowing God's Word—it's about living it. Studying Scripture should lead to transformation, helping us apply biblical truths to our struggles with sin, relationships, work, and daily life.

That's why care groups should go beyond Bible study. They should be a place to build friendships, encourage one another, serve the community, and share the gospel with unbelievers. A care group centered on Christ will naturally overflow with love for both the church and the world.

Conclusion

Care groups are not about self-centered expectations, flawless relationships, or academic Bible studies alone. They are about growing in Christ, loving one another, and living out the gospel in real and tangible ways.

ATTENTION PARENTS OF 7-13 YEARS-OLDS!

In today's fast-paced world, kids grow up quickly—but as parents, we can make a lasting impact when we lean on God's Word and step out in faith. At this pivotal age, children seek role models and face peer pressure. How can we guide them in their choices? Why do some embrace the Gospel while others turn away?

👉 Join us for an engaging, hands-on session hosted by the Family Life and Children's Ministries, equipping you with practical biblical insights. Last time, 48 parents attended and found it invaluable—don't miss this opportunity!

 Date: Sat, 5 April

 Venue: Light 1 & 2 Auditorium (L3)

 Time: 10.00am - 12.00pm
