INTO A LIFE-CHANGING
RELATIONSHIP WITH JESUS CHRIST.

Dressing For My King

Article by Melanie Lim

Every morning, we stand before our closets facing more than a fashion dilemma – we confront a spiritual mirror.

Studies suggest women spend, on average, 17 minutes a day - 6 months of our lives! - choosing outfits. As we button blouses and adjust necklines, we're not just choosing clothes; we're answering a fundamental question: "Who am I?"— or rather, "Whose am I?"

Secular culture screams its answer in neon lights. Social media and celebrity influencers preach that value comes from visibility - confidence means flaunting more skin, and worth is measured in likes and lingering glances. Their mantra is unmistakable: Your body is your currency - spend it freely.

But Scripture whispers a better truth: Your worth lies in Whose you are — reflect Him (1 Tim 2:9-10; 1 Peter 3:3-4). You are God's workmanship, His temple, His beloved daughter.

Threads of Testimony

We instinctively understand clothing's power to proclaim. My school uniform was a daily reminder — one glance at its colours, and everyone knew where I belonged. My attire declared my allegiance before I spoke a word.

Scripture also recognises that clothing conveys meaning. God designed the priestly garments not for style, but as testimony. When Aaron put on his vestments, every thread whispered: "This one belongs to Yahweh." His clothing left no room for doubt.

Our wardrobes today may lack such explicit symbolism, but their message remains potent: Do our choices declare our citizenship in Christ's Kingdom?

Heart over Hemline

Discussions about modesty often swing between two unhelpful extremes.

Legalism reduces modesty to measurements. Inches of fabric, centimeters of hemline—as if holiness could be achieved through a dress code.

Licentiousness, in turn, shrugs and says, "God looks only at the heart, so wear whatever you want." Anything goes. Both approaches miss the heart of biblical modesty.

True modesty isn't about rules or rebellion. It's about love made visible – love that honours God, and tenderly considers others. We pursue holiness not to conform to man-made standards, but because our Father is holy, and His grace has transformed our hearts.

Biblical modesty means pausing to ask: "Does this reflect the dignity I carry as God's daughter?" And considering: "Could this cause a brother or sister to stumble?" It means clothing ourselves in the awareness that our bodies are holy ground — temples bought not with gold, but with priceless blood.

“When we dress with intention,
we're not just covering our bodies —
we're revealing our hearts.”

Wearing Our Heart on Our Sleeve

There's an old phrase—"wearing your heart on your sleeve." It originated with medieval knights who would tie their lady's colours around their arms, declaring their devotion to all.

As believers, we too make our allegiance visible through what we wear — not through rigid dress codes, but by thoughtful choices that honour the One who purchased us with His blood.

Paul calls us to “put on the new self” (Eph 4:24). Each morning offers us this opportunity. When we dress with intention, we're not just covering our bodies — we're revealing our hearts. Like those knights of old, we can tie the colours of our King around our hearts, letting our choices quietly declare our devotion.

Tomorrow's Choice

So tomorrow morning, before reaching for that hanger, let's pause - not to chase the perfect outfit, but to centre our hearts. Don't just ask, "How do I look?", but "Who will they see?"

Then step into your day adorned with something more glorious than any designer label or fashion trend - the radiant joy of a woman who knows she's irrevocably chosen, infinitely treasured, and eternally loved.
