Leading generations

INTO A LIFE-CHANGING
RELATIONSHIP WITH JESUS CHRIST.

Following Christ in the Formative Years

Varsity Ministry serves tertiary students and young men in National Service through a formative season. Noah serves in Varsity Ministry's Core Group and as a Care Group Leader. We asked him about young adults, discipleship, and his hopes for the next generation.

1. Why are the tertiary and National Service years significant spiritual seasons, and what do you wish the wider church understood about the pressures faced in this season?

One major pressure facing young adults today is intellectual. At this stage of life, many are forming their identities and asking not only how they should live as Christians, but whether Christianity is true. In an increasingly sceptical age, they encounter difficult questions about the Bible, the resurrection of Jesus, suffering, the goodness of God, and competing worldviews.

When I was a student, much of what I knew centred on conversion and faithful Christian living. But I was far less prepared to engage opposing, reasoned viewpoints. I lacked a framework to express and defend my faith deeply and rigorously.

Many young adults face the same inadequacy today, and difficult questions can lead them to doubt. With information so accessible, those who cannot find convincing answers in the church often turn to YouTube and other online voices.

We must equip young believers not only to know what they believe, but why. We need to engage difficult questions and help the next generation contend for truth with conviction and grace. The church must be a pillar of truth where believers are equipped to defend their faith.

2. Young adults are making major decisions about identity, relationships, vocation, and faith. Which of these areas tends to be the greatest spiritual battleground?

I think identity is one of the greatest spiritual battlegrounds for young adults. Many are asking: Who am I? What will define me? What kind of person do I want to become? What is the meaning of my life? What will give me joy?

These questions shape how they approach relationships, vocation, and faith. The world offers competing answers, encouraging them to find identity in achievement, career, relationships, or social acceptance. The spiritual battle is therefore about what ultimately defines and governs their lives.

We must help young people see that their identity is found in Christ, and that God's Word is the final authority shaping who they are and how they live. We must help them experience

Christ as a greater joy than anything the world can offer.

“The real question is not whether people enjoyed an activity, but whether we are faithfully helping them grow in Christlikeness and obedience to God’s Word.”

3. What is the difference between merely organising activities for young adults and truly discipling them?

We can easily measure success by how well our programs are run, how many attend, or how much people enjoy them. But people are the priority; programs are tools that serve their growth through teaching, relationships, fellowship, and spiritual formation.

The real question is not whether people enjoyed an activity, but whether we are faithfully helping them grow in Christlikeness and obedience to God’s Word. People are precious in God’s sight, and those He entrusts to our care are worth our deepest investment. We want to steward that responsibility by knowing, loving, teaching, and intentionally labouring for their maturity in Christ.

4. What kind of men and women do you pray will emerge from Varsity Ministry over the next five to ten years?

I pray that Varsity Ministry would produce men and women who deeply love and fear the Lord: those who treasure Christ above all else and gladly surrender their lives to follow Him at any cost. Men and women who hunger for God's Word, whose lives are marked by prayer and joyful obedience, and who desire holiness more than the approval of the world.

I pray that they would be courageous heralds of the gospel, unashamed of Christ and eager to make Him known wherever God places them. Ultimately, we long to see a generation whose whole lives testify that Christ is worthy of everything.

CHURCH HAPPENINGS

WOMEN'S MINISTRY - OUR BODIES' BEST KEPT SECRET

Discover your lymphatic system and why it matters to everyday health.

We hear plenty about heart health and blood circulation, but much less about another remarkable network quietly detoxifying our bodies — the lymphatic system.

Our lymphatic system works for us every day — so how can we work with it?

Join Yifen, Occupational Therapist and Certified Lymphedema Therapist, for an easy-to-understand health talk exploring how this often-overlooked system helps maintain fluid balance, reduce swelling, support immune function and keep our tissues healthy. We'll also discover its fascinating connection with our digestive system.
