INTO A LIFE-CHANGING RELATIONSHIP WITH JESUS CHRIST.

Your Work is Your Witness

Article by Pastor Mike Reddick
Deputy Missions Director

It has been wisely said, “the only Bible some people read is you.” Many people don’t read the Bible or attend church, so their only understanding of Christ and Christianity is what they see in you. People you know do not consider Christ simply because you attend a Bible study during your lunch hour, read your Bible on a break, or have Christian paraphernalia on your desk. Today, with hot-desking, hybrid work arrangements and working from home, our workplaces may look very different. Yet whether we interact with colleagues in person, through video calls or online, what impacts the world around us is how we live. Does our walk with Christ match our talk about Christ? Do people see the principles of Christianity lived out through our lives? This is especially important in our work, where many of us spend much of our time. We must ensure that God is not absent from our workplace, but present in us.

"God shows up in our workplace—in and through us—when we are good workers and great colleagues."

Our Conduct is Our Witness

I learned early on in my career that if I was going to survive as a Christian and be a good testimony for Christ in my workplace, people needed to know three things about me. They needed to know that I was a Christian, I was married, and I do not drink. By sharing these values upfront, I knew my actions and behavior would be scrutinized. My colleagues would either see a positive witness or watch me damage my testimony. How I worked and behaved would influence their perception of Christ. This motivated me to honor the Lord by striving to be both a good worker and a great colleague.

Paul reminded us that our work is a powerful witness for Christ when he said, “Bondservants are to be submissive to their own masters in everything; they are to be well-pleasing, not argumentative, not pilfering, but showing all good faith, so that in everything they may adorn the doctrine of God our Savior” (Titus 2:9–10). In other words, God shows up in our workplace—in and through us—when we are good workers and great colleagues.

Working for the Lord

One way we reflect God in our workplace is by remembering that we ultimately work for the Lord, and He will reward our earthly efforts. Again, Paul encourages us, “Whatever you do, work heartily, as for the Lord and not for men, knowing that from the Lord you will receive the inheritance as your reward. You are serving the Lord Christ” (Colossians 3:23–24).

Think about your work in the marketplace this way: God does not divide the Christian life into sacred and secular parts, but everything is sacred, and we are to single-mindedly serve Him in our everyday work. Our so-called 'secular' work is actually full-time ministry service.

Strength for Everyday Faithfulness

Our ability to reflect God in the workplace is directly connected to our personal devotional life. The strength to stand for the Lord, live for the Lord and work for the Lord comes from the time you spend with the Lord.

Your time with God away from work will enable you to live for God at work. Whether it's in the morning or evening, spending time with God is crucial. As we draw near to Him, He empowers us to live in such a way that others can't help but see Christ in us.

And when they do, God will no longer be missing from our workplace—He will be present, working through us and transforming lives one interaction at a time.

We live in a fallen world—and even God's people are not spared from the effects of sin, pain, and struggle. But you don't have to walk through it alone.

Biblical counseling is a safe, gospel-centered space to find help, hope, and clarity through God's Word. It isn't about fixing people—it's about walking with one another in truth and grace. If you're carrying anxiety, grief, relational tension, or just feeling stuck, you're not weak—and you're not the only one.
